The story is told of a German, who took the hands of his clock to the maker to have them fixed, because they did not keep proper time. Of course, the clock-maker demanded the works, as in them lay the trouble. Boils and blotches, pimples and other eruptions on the exterior tell of a disordered condition of the blood within. If you have these indications, be wise in time, and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the liver and kidneys in good working order, purifies the blood, cleanses the system from all impurities, from whatever cause arising, and forms up the functions generally.

"Golden Medical Discovery" checks the frightful inroads of Scrofula, and, if taken in time, arrests the ravages of Consumption, the Lungs (which is large scrofula), purifies and enriches the blood, thereby curing all Skin and Scalp Diseases, Ulcers, Sores, Swellings, and kindred ailments. It is powerfully tonic as well as alterative or blood-cleansing, in its effects, hence it strengthens the system and restores vitality, thereby dispelling all those languid "tired feelings" experienced by the debilitated. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

"Golden Medical Discovery" is the only blood and lung remedy, sold by druggists, and guaranteed by its manufacturers, to do all that it is claimed to accomplish, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

GARLANDS FOR THE DEAD.

Advance! Each buried brave
Is now a glorious king
Who, proudly leaning on his glaive,
Applauds the meed ye bring.
No lethargy year
Your deathless heroes crave,
Anthems with incense of the bloomiest year!
Let fair hands crown the brave.

They did not bleed in vain—
That father, brother, son—
Who made grey shore and pine clad plain
An altar and a throne.
Flame lifts the crimson sign
They once to battle gave,
Above they form their gallant line;
Let fair hands crown the brave.

The surging tide is spent,
The mighty march is o'er,
A mist of mora, the soldier's tent
Has fled forevermore
But Home and State remain,
Where'er they died to save
Will quench the fire and burst the chain;
Let fair hands crown the brave.

THE FORTUNE OF BATTLE.

A STORY OF THE CIVIL WAR BY JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

[Copyrighted, 1889, by American Press Association.]

"I AM SO GLAD YOU ARE GOING."

"I am so glad you are going, Darrell, and yet it almost breaks my heart to think of it. I had so hoped you would go, but I would not have asked you to for the world. You see how woman-like I am. When you do what I was praying that you would do I can't keep the tears back. O, how can I let you go!" And she clasped him more tightly in her arms and wept convulsively on his breast.

"Do not make it any harder, darling," he replied, kissing her tenderly. "I'm not much of a hero at best. I feel my patriotic resolution giving way when I see your streaming eyes and your distressed face."

"I will be brave, Darrell, I will be worthy of you. See now," and she dried her eyes with her handkerchief, "the tears are all gone."

"You are brave, my dear girl; braver than I am, I fear. It is far harder for a woman to let the man she loves go to battle than it is for him to lead the forlornest of forlorn hopes."

This very sentimental dialogue, osculatorily punctuated, took place in the drawing room of a conventional brown stone front in Thirty-fourth street, New York, rather late one evening at the close of April, 1861. The speakers were Helen Morley, aged 20, and Darrell Seaton, aged 26. She had an intelligent, interesting face without regular features, gray eyes, light brown hair, a slight, willowy figure of medium height. She was the youngest of three daughters, two of them married, her mother being dead, and her father a prosperous dry goods jobber, in whose residence these love scenes were occurring, while he was passionately discussing the prospects of the civil war with several of his fellow merchants at the Union club.

Darrell Seaton, after having been graduated at Columbia, had studied medicine, and been practicing three years under promising circumstances, as his father was a physician also, and had gained a prominent place, though little money, in his profession. The elder Seaton had six children—Darrell the eldest—two sons and four daughters—and, having been opposed to slavery all his life, had naturally reared his family to the same views. Darrell had believed, while at college, that armed conflict between the north and south could not long be postponed, and had made up his mind, when it should come, to take some active part in it. A year before he had met Helen Morley, between whom and himself a close and sympathetic friendship soon arose. They were too good friends, they used to say, to fall in love with one another, and they firmly believed what they said. Thus secure, as they fancied, against any dangerous attachment, they passed much time together, took long walks when occasion favored, read the same books, and were both passionately fond of music.

The elder Morley and Seaton had been intimate from boyhood, having been born and having spent their early years in the same town in the interior of New York state. Morley was very different from Seaton. He had far less intellect, with less literary and artistic taste, but a far greater fondness for acquiring money. In truth, he had often said in youth that he intended to be a rich man, and he had largely fulfilled his intentions, being worth, at 60, not far from a million. His love of gain, as often happens, had increased with his gaining until he had come to regard wealth as indispensable. He was not destitute of generosity by any means, he did many kind things without considering expense, but he certainly overestimated the value and importance of money. He had expected to lose heavily by bad debts from the hostile attitude of the south, and this, perhaps, more than any other consideration, moral or political, had recently made him its enemy. In consonance with his financial ideas, he had seen that two of his daughters had married fortunes and he had determined that Helen should follow their example.

Clarence Williams, a young man devoted to society, clubs and pictorial dissipation, chiefly distinguished for idleness and the possession of a millionaire father, had imagined himself deeply in love with Helen, and had proposed to her a few months before the firing on Sumter had roused the nation from its protracted lethargy. To his surprise and indignation she had positively refused him—him who had thought that the offer of his hand would be accounted an honor. He had then, with singular lack of pride, referred his case to Mr. Morley, who favored his suit and encouraged him to believe that the girl would doubtless change her mind, that she probably had romantic notions on the subject of marriage, which a year or two more would correct.

In an interview with Helen, she told him she had a temperamental aversion to Mr Williams that never could be overcome. Asked if she loved anybody else she replied evasively that she was not aware that she did. "Then there is no rival?" said her father, for Williams to persevere. A girl whose heart is not preoccupied never knows anything about the state of her affections. Y'all come round Helen fi due time. Why my dear Clarence Williams will inherit two or three millions.

When Darrell Seaton read the fateful dispatch on the morning of April 12 and felt that it meant indefinite possibly eternal separation from Helen Morley, the wild throbbing of his heart revealed that his friendship had been but a mask for an intense, passionate love. He resolved to tell her so at the first opportunity, and he kept his resolution. He did not ask her directly to be his wife, but felt that she ought to know how he had developed himself, and that he expect had developed, so the truth, the "Richard, Richard, Richard,

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The following named persons are announced as candidates for the office specified below, subject to the decision of the Democratic County Convention:

FOR COUNTY COMMISSIONER,

HARRY B. WHEELER, of Delmar.

C. H. TREMAINE, of Lawrence.

I hereby announce myself as a Democratic candidate for County Commissioner.

C. M. DEWITT, Malinsburg, Pa.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

The Democratic State Convention of Pennsylvania will assemble at the Academy of Music, in the city of Scranton, at 10 o'clock a. m., on WEDNESDAY, JULY 2, 1890, to nominate candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Secretary of Internal Affairs. The convention will consist of representative delegates chosen under the rules of the party from the several Assembly Districts, one for each 1,000 Democratic votes cast at the last preceding Gubernatorial election, or for a fraction of 1,000 such votes amounting to 500 or more in the respective representative districts, provided that each representative district shall have at least one delegate.

ELLIOTT P. KISNER,

Chairman State Democratic Committee.

BENJAMIN M. NEAD, Secretary.

SENATOR CAMERON believes that the Senate Financial Committee will make some radical changes in the McKinley bill.

THE election in the Third Congressional district last week resulted in the election of Hon. Richard Vaux, as the successor of the late Samuel J. Randall, by over 8,000 majority. His only opponent was a Prohibitionist.

THE net increase of taxes by the McKinley bill will amount to $78,000,000. Does this look like a reduction in taxes already burdensome? Yet those who are now howling the loudest about their heavy taxes voted in 1888 to place the monopoly representatives in office, because these men told them that tariff reform meant free trade.

THE Republican Philadelphia Telegraph denounces the Republicans who framed and voted for the McKinley bill in very strong language. It styles them "reckless Chinese wall raisers and campaign fat fryers." It is very evident that the Telegraph entertains the opinion that the tariff is a tax, levied for the purpose of benefitting monopolies and to keep a number of political paupers in office.

JULIUS CÆSAR BURROWS, of Michigan, a Republican Congressman, is reported as saying that the next House of Representatives will be Democratic by from forty to fifty majority. Mr. Burrows represents a strong Republican district, but the tariff reform sentiment is increasing so rapidly that even Mr. Burrows may be left out in the cold when the returns are counted after the next election in the Fourth (Mich.) Congressional district.

SEVERAL of the Legislators of Louisiana, in defending the lottery bill, said that the criticisms of the Northern papers were not worth noticing, and a resolution to investigate the alleged attempts of the Lottery Company to bribe the members was tabled. There is nothing very strange in the language and acts of the Louisiana law-makers. A concern that can afford to pay the State $1,000,000 a year for the privilege of conducting its business doubtless has a method of influencing Legislators.

JUSTICE MILLER, of the United States Supreme Court, writes, in reply to questions from Rev. J. P. Tetar, his personal friend at Oskaloosa, Ia., explaining that he decided as he did in the "original package" case against State prohibition because the highest court had made a similar decision sixty years ago, and that decision "fell from the lips of the greatest constitutional lawyer that this government ever had." Justice Miller adds: "We are as much sworn to decide according to the Constitution of the United States as you are bound by your conscience to a faith in the Bible."

THE truth is blurted out occasionally by a Republican paper. Taggart's Times, of Philadelphia, contained the following a few days ago: "This high tariff is specially designed for, and is supported by, wealthy manufacturers and capitalists, who are benefited by the increased prices of the goods they manufacture. Under this system the wealthy manufacturers have grown rich; but while they are protected in their business investments, what protection is there for the workingmen, the sturdy mechanics and laborers of this country, who are now being crowded out of employment by the hundreds of thousands of foreigners of all civilized nationalities, who are dumped upon our shores every year, and are willing to work at cheaper rates than American workmen have been paid in the past?"

A PROMINENT merchant of Wellsville informed a Democrat reporter recently that many of the farmers of this and Potter county have their butter and cheese mortgaged four months ahead. If this is so, there is "something rotten in Denmark." We would like to inquire of some of these farmers whose coat tails are dragging in the mud, if they really think protection protects—the farmers.—Wellsville (N. Y.) Democrat. The farmers of this county may not be in such deplorable straits, yet they are bitterly complaining of the depression in farm values and produce. Many of them have openly confessed that they have been deceived, and do not hesitate to say that the tariff is a tax which robs instead of benefitting them. They are receiving a tariff reform education, and it is sincerely trusted that they will be ready to graduate as advocates of their own interests at the coming elections.

THE farmers of Bucks county held a convention at Doylestown last week Wednesday, and "they hit the bull's-eye the first shot," says the Philadelphia Times. "They declared that the Pennsylvania farmers should select the best candidates from the party tickets and vote for them if any are known to favor justice to the farmers, and to run independent candidates when necessary. Tariff Talk.

Under the party lash the McKinley monopoly protective tariff bill passed the House on Wednesday of last week by a vote of 164 to 148. Two Republicans, Coleman of Louisiana, and Featherstone of Arkansas, voted with the Democrats. Just before the vote was taken brief speeches were made, every one of us talking at once, eager to say the last word, until the House resembled the grand stand at a base ball game when the umpire's decision is against the home nine. Mr. McMillin said two hundred amendments had been offered, but the Republicans had refused to allow them to be voted on. Mr. Butterworth also made himself heard, claiming that the opportunity to amend had been cut off by the committee, and that there had been no effort to obtain the consensus of opinion of the party. The committee had forced its bill through and attempted to blind the political conscience of members. If this were the case many votes would be recorded differently. Mr. Farquhar, Republican, also denounced the bill.

As soon as the third reading of the bill had been ordered, Mr. Carlisle offered the following amendment, which was defeated by 163 to 141:

Resolved, That the pending bill be recommitted to the Committee on Ways and Means, with instructions to report the same back to the House at the earliest possible day, so amended by substitute or otherwise, as to reduce the revenues of the government by reducing the burdens of taxation on the people, instead of reducing the duties by imposing prohibitory rates of taxation upon imported goods.

When the amendment was reached increasing the duty on tin plate, the Democrats called for a vote. It came near resulting in a Democratic victory, the vote being 150 to 149. Butterworth, Flick, Henderson of Iowa, Kelly, Mason, McComas, Mudd and Taylor of Illinois, voted with the Democrats, who won the next fight in the interest of tariff reform. By a typographical error the bill reduced the duty on jute yarn from 35 to 30 per cent. A committee amendment was pending to make it 35, as intended. McKinley was beaten, however, by 143 yeas to 144 nays. Anderson, Taylor of Illinois, De Haven, Flick, Henderson of Iowa, Lacey, Snider, Kerr, Featherstone, Kelly, Lind and Dunnell voted with the Democrats. With the assistance of about twenty Republicans the Democrats defeated the amendment increasing the duty on woolen, worsted yarn and unwashed wool.

The next amendment, increasing the duty on worsted cloths and knitted goods, was also defeated by the Democrats with the aid of Anderson, Comstock, De Haven, Dolliver, Dunnell, Featherstone, Flick, Henderson, Lacey, Lind, Owen, Strubble and Taylor.

When the final result was announced cheers were heard on the Republican side, but Biggs, of California, could be heard when he said: "You won't be so happy about it next November."

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Times says it is claimed by Republicans "that enough Republican votes would have been recorded against the bill to defeat it but for the fact that they had absolute assurances that the bill will be torn to pieces and revised by the Senate. It is well understood that the Senate Finance Committee will report a very different measure."

This seems to be the general opinion among those high in authority on the Republican side. The House has voted to redeem party pledges, made to those from whom the fat was fried in 1888, knowing that the Senate will kill the bill. This is tariff tinkering of a very low order. If the McKinley prohibitory tariff bill is right it should be made operative at the earliest possible day. If wrong and whipped through the House, simply to satisfy the clamor of a few hundred monopolists, then the work of the Republican majority is far from commendable. There is little danger that the bill will ever become a law. Republicans may talk about the alleged benefits of a monopoly-fostering tariff, yet they dare not vote to increase the present excessive duty on the necessaries of life. The House Republicans by passing the McKinley monstrosity have simply forced the Senate to shoulder the responsibilities of the situation. This action has but one interpretation—the defeat of monopoly's long cherished scheme and a confession that the Republican policy is not what the people demand. In fact the passage by the Republican House of this "infamous spawn of monopoly greed," has virtually sealed the doom of a prohibitory tariff and hastened the approach of honest tariff reform—a measure which will afford protection to all classes.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY COMMITTEE.

Partisan Delegates Selected for the State Convention—Vigilance Committee.

Pursuant to the call of Chairman Urell the Democratic County Committee met at Tioga on Tuesday afternoon. About two o'clock the members of the Committee assembled in the parlors of the Park Hotel and the meeting was called to order by the Chairman. Mr. Urell stated that the business before the Committee was the selection of delegates to the State Convention and the appointing of a new Vigilance Committee.

Upon calling the roll the following members of the County Committee responded to their names: M. C. Clark, Blossburg; F. E. Phelps, Covington; W. D. Knox, Deerfield; R. W. Stewart, Lawrenceville; F. W. Clark, Mansfield; Geo. P. Davis, Middlebury; S. O. Watts, Morris; Daniel S. Horton, Jackson; R. E. Urell, Tioga; Walter Sherwood, Wellsboro, First Ward; John W. Bailey, Wellsboro, Second Ward; L. Upon motion E. A. Bryden, of Wellsboro, was substituted for William Smith, of Charleston; D. C. Ford, of Lawrenceville, for J. H. Miller, of Millerton, and H. D. Wheeler for J. H. Hubers, of Elk.

In addition to the above members of the Committee, there was a good representation of Democrats from other parts of the county and considerable interest was manifested in the proceedings.

The following persons were appointed to constitute the Vigilance Committee:

Bloss—John Burke, John Sweeney.
Blossburg—H. H. Roberts, T. J. Amey.

Wellsboro, Third Ward—James Bartlett, Peter Strubler.
Westfield—J. E. Green, Alonzo Simmons.
Westfield Borough—Frank Strang, Andrew English.

A prolonged discussion then followed as to whether each election district was entitled to two delegates to the County Convention. The question was finally settled by the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That only two delegates to the County Convention be elected in each township and borough, with the exception of Wellsboro, which is entitled to four delegates; and that in townships with two election districts the caucuses for the election of delegates be held at the last polling place before the division of the township, excepting Elk, and that to be held at Lecloneis.

The selection of two delegates to the State Convention being in order E. A. Bryden, J. W. Bailey and W. D. Knox were nominated. A ballot was taken, which resulted as follows: Bryden, 7; Bailey, 13; Knox, 9. Messrs. Bailey and Knox were declared elected by the Chairman.

The following resolution by Walter Sherwood was adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Committee that the delegates elected are instructed for Robert E. Pattison for Governor.

Dr. R. B. Smith, of Tioga, and John L. Sexton, of Blossburg, were chosen alternate delegates to the State Convention, after which the meeting adjourned.

MULTIPLIED TAXES.

How Monopoly Has Increased Taxes Upon the People.

(From Congressman McMillin's House Speech.)

Under the rule that has been adopted there are 300 amendments pending before the committee and printed in the Record that can never be considered. There are more than 100 items proposed in this bill which will make increases in the rates of duty, yet the Committee of Ways and Means has told us that it has no data and can give none to justify these increases. What more? They have repealed the sugar tax only to put additional taxes on every other schedule.

They have increased chemicals $3,491,680; earthenware, $6,960,110; the metal schedule, $9,829,565; tobacco, $17,965,435; agricultural products, $3,809,840; cotton goods, $1,553,826; hemp, flax and jute, $6,807,299; sundries, $1,612,405, and made very large increases on the other schedules that are embraced in this bill. The increase not estimated in the committee's calculations amounts to $95,783,000. This added to what the committee confess they have increased makes the increase on the different schedules outside of sugar, $99,049,000. Then they give a bounty on sugar amounting to $7,500,000.

The net increase of taxation, therefore, by this bill to the people of the United States, including the sugar bounty, is $73,549,483.81. This last does not include many increases as to which there is no data. After deducting the sugar tax repealed the bill leaves the people taxed $18,000,000 more than now. It is not only a Republican measure, but is to be passed by Republican methods. You are called upon to vote upon these increases without debate and without hope of amendment. The committee has taken most of the two days, and not a single amendment has been adopted that has been offered by any one else.

MORE RAILROAD RUMORS.

A Possible Hitch in the Plans for the Reading's Proposed Northern Extension.

The Philadelphia Record says: The official announcement by the Reading Railroad that it and the Erie Railroad intend to build jointly a line northward from Williamsport to a connection with the Erie near Corning, N. Y., excited a great deal of interest last Wednesday among railroad men. It has been known for some time that the Reading has been desirous of getting a connection with the Erie by a shorter route than that of the Fall Brook line, but it is doubtful if anything would have been done for the present at least, if the recent aggressiveness of the Lehigh Valley Railroad had not aroused the Erie to the necessity for action.

The Lehigh Valley now uses the tracks of the Erie between Elmira and Buffalo for its heavy Western traffic in passenger, grain and coal, but when its new line from Geneva to Buffalo shall be finished next year all this business will pass over its own tracks, and the Erie will be a heavy loser. To make up for this inevitable loss, the Erie is anxious to get into closer relations with the Reading to secure the heavy tonnage which the latter sends over the Fall Brook Road, and the Reading at the same time is very desirous of obtaining a connection with the Elmira, Cortland and Northern Railroad, which may be regarded as a Reading dependency, as President Corbin controls it. The building of the proposed new road would serve both these purposes.

It is possible, however, that there may be some hitch in this arrangement. A well-posted railroad man said Wednesday that the Reading had a long-term traffic contract with the Fall Brook Coal Company, by which it must use the road for business north of Williamsport, and the Fall Brook Company also has a lease of a part of the Erie's Tioga branch northward from Blossburg, which is to be a portion of the connecting link. It is not only possible, but altogether probable, that the Fall Brook Company will enter a most vigorous protest against any scheme that seems likely to divert business from it, and as the company is controlled by the Vanderbilts the Reading cannot afford to ignore any remonstrance from them.

The projected road, if built, will have several advantages over the Fall Brook Coal Company's Pine Creek branch. It will make the distance from Williamsport to Corning twenty-one miles shorter than by the present route, and it will avoid the danger from floods, to which the Pine Creek road is subject. That road is closed frequently because of washouts, caused by heavy rains, and after the big flood of last May it was closed for several weeks, long portions of the roadbed having been entirely destroyed. The route of the new road will be entirely free, it is said, from any such objections. The grades will not be very heavy either.

In speaking of the proposed extension of the Reading, the Elmira Gazette says: "It is stated that the Reading will use the Erie's Tioga branch from Blossburg to Lawrenceville as a means of making the Buffalo connection. The Reading will be on such good terms with the Erie people that it will be neither difficult or expensive to secure a lease of the Tioga branch rails direct from Tioga Junction to Elmira, and naturally, to a convenient and inexpensive connection with the Reading's northern feeder, the E. C. & N."

The readers of the GAZETTE will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positively cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

That Tired Feeling

Yes, cannot always tell what may be the cause. Possibly it may be due to change of season, climate, or life; possibly to overwork or overstudy, to mental suffering, or nervous ailments. But there is no mistaking its effects. You know you feel "almost dead to death," without strength to do anything, languishing seems to be all gone, and in its place indifference to how the world wags—an indescribable languor and weakness. You have no appetite, do not care about food, and only eat because it is the hour for eating, or from force of habit.

This must be stopped. Your condition must be changed at once, or like a ship drifting with the inward tide, you will soon be dashed upon the rocks of incurable disease and death. Rouse the torpid kidneys and liver, tone the digestive organs, create a new appetite, purify and vitalize the impure and sluggish blood, cure the headache, and overcome all the prostrating effects of That Tired Feeling, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It is just what you need, and to delay taking it is unwise.

"Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla that extreme tired feeling has gone, my appetite returned, and it has toned me up generally." CLARA W. PEEBLES, Shirley, Mass.

"My wife suffered from sick headache and neuralgia. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she was much relieved." W. E. BAER

THE Lakeside Press, of Cleveland, says: "Mr. Sidman deserves the many kind appreciative notices given him. He is a young man, but personates the jovial, simple, honest old farmer with rare fidelity and ease and without the gross exaggeration too often seen in characterizations. His quaint expressions and peculiarities were thoroughly enjoyed." Don't fail to see Mr. Sidman as "Uncle Rube" at Annandale Hall, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

TO THE FARMERS IN THE VICINITY OF WELLSBORO.—Come to the borough tomorrow (Decoration Day) prepared to stay through the evening, purchase your tickets early at Spalding's drug store, and attend the great moral comedy of "Uncle Rube," at Annandale Hall in the evening. Nothing like it—150 laughs by actual count—purely original. Come and see Mr. Sidman represent the "substantial York State farmer," supported by an excellent cast of home talent, and you will never regret it. This play is of high character, full of mirth and good humor.

THE new schedule of passenger trains of the Erie Railway, which went into effect on the 11th, besides for improving the service for through and local passengers, embraced the establishment of a dining car on the through express train No 4, which leaves Buffalo at 10 o'clock p m., and stops at all the larger stations en route to New York. The dining car is attached at Port Jervis, where an inviting breakfast will be found ready, and by the time the train reaches New York business may receive immediate attention, after a well prepared meal leisurely partaken.

THE Tioga County Sunday-school Association will hold its annual convention in the Presbyterian Church, at Tioga, on Wednesday and Thursday, June 4th and 5th. Every Sunday-school of every denomination in the county is earnestly requested to elect to the convention two or more delegates, who will attend with their pastor and superintendent. We want a complete report from every Sunday school in the county. Wednesday evening Rev. Irvin H. Correll, for many years a missionary in Japan, will deliver a lecture on "Japan and the Japanese." The lecture will be illustrated with many curiosities and articles in common use in Japan.

—The present Board of Commissioners have increased the indebtedness of the county $60,400 during their term of office. Mr. Wheeler desires a re-election, and some of the boodle Democrats are working for him.—Lawrenceville Herald. The gentlemen who compose the present Board of County Commissioners are in no way responsible for the increase in the county debt. They could not prevent the June flood, which necessitated the building of several new and expensive bridges. Men should not be criticised for doing their duty—a duty made wonderfully plain on the morning of June 1, 1889.

—The boiler of the portable saw-mill on the farm of Mr Wm. Wildrick, in Woodhull, about five miles north of Osceola, exploded last Thursday morning about eleven o'clock. When at Lawrenceville on the way home with his prisoner, while Officer Bennett was writing a message in the depot, Loper made a break for the New York State line, which was near by, and when he had passed it refused to continue the excursion and resisted the officer's efforts to bring him. Bennett finally dragged him back into the State and then handcuffed him for the balance of the trip."

Owing to the absence of Burgess Bordan, Assistant Burgess Chandler called the Council to order on Tuesday evening. The question of making repairs to the streets which had been damaged by broken water pipes caused some little discussion and caused Mr. Derby to inquire if the borough was bound to repair the streets damaged by the water company.

Mr. Sherwood thought the matter could be amicably adjusted if proper attention was given the same.

Mr. Young said he had conferred with the borough counsel in regard to the proposed contract with the Wellsboro Electric Light and Heat Company, and that action had been deferred until the company shall receive its charter from the State, as no contract could be made by or with a "paper company."

Mr. Deane moved that the borough contract with Simeon Hilbolt to furnish 20,000 feet of hemlock lumber at $8 per thousand feet.

Mr. Sherwood supported the motion, which was carried.

Mr. Sherwood said he did not wish to make a complaint, but was of the opinion that a notice should be served upon Dr. A. B. Eastman to make the covering to the coal hole in front of his block safe for pedestrains.

Mr. Sherwood moved that notices be served upon Clark L. Willcox, Dr. A. B. Eastman and Wm. Roche, to regrade and repair sidewalks.

Mr. Deane sustained the motion, which was carried.

Mr. Sherwood called the attention of the Council to a pile of flood trash in front of the Presbyterian Church on Norris street.

On motion of Mr. Deane the Street Commissioner was instructed to remove the nuisance.

Mr. Sherwood favored the plan of taking the gravel from the bed of Morris creek between Grant and Walnut street. Messrs. Derby and Deane concurred in this, Mr. Derby stating that the stream was so filled with gravel that a slight flood overflowed its banks.

The dog muzzling question again came up and caused the usual amount of talk. Clerk Shattuck informed the Council that no dog catcher had been appointed for the present year.

Mr. Hastings thought it was the duty of the borough officials to build and keep crosswalks in proper repair. He also said the driving of cattle through the streets, was becoming quite a nuisance by reason of the negligence of those having the cattle in charge. Referring to the dog ordinance, he held that the members of the Council were bending their oath considerably by not taking a decided stand in the matter of having the dogs in the borough properly muzzled.

On motion of Mr. Sherwood the Street Commissioner was instructed to obtain his supply of gravel for street purposes from the bed of Morris creek, and the Council adjourned.

Is There Coal at Jackson Summit?

It is said that the people of Jackson Summit and vicinity are considerably agitated over the alleged discovery of a vein of bituminous coal in Tower hill, commonly known as Bly hill, about one mile from Jackson Summit, on land owned by Charles Drake, a farmer. A correspondent states that the discoverer is a minister, by the name of Cole, who claims to have made the discovery some twenty-six years ago, but left that section soon after, and has only recently returned. He is now about seventy five years of age and a man of undoubted veracity. A meeting of the land owners of the vicinity was held last week Tuesday on the premises of A. B. Bly, and it was agreed to pay Mr Cole $100, in case he shall show a vein of coal and in case it is in sufficient quantities to warrant the opening of a mine he is to receive $1,500. Last Friday work was commenced for the purpose of uncovering the vein. Mr Cole is perfectly confident that he can show a four foot vein, and in that case a mine will be opened at once.

A PIOUS FRAUD.

M. F. Sammeth, the "M. C. A. Secretary," Leaves Town Wanted by Creditors.

Last July M. F. Sammeth, an under sized German tailor, wearing glasses, came here from Binghamton and obtained employment at S. Black's merchant tailoring establishment. Sammeth appeared to be very religious attending the M. E. Church regularly and taking great interest in the services. Soon after his arrival he sent for his wife and they commenced housekeeping in a dwelling in Grant street. In September the Will's family, evangelists, of Towanda, began holding meetings in the Methodist Church. This was evidently the opportunity for which Sammeth had been waiting, as he at once became conspicuous by working himself into a fervor of religious excitement. Soon after the departure of the Willsons, Sammeth commenced to agitate the question of organizing a Young Men's Christian Association in Wellsboro. In this he was partially successful, as a number of prominent citizens pledged handsome sums of money to support the Association. There was a hitch in the young man's plans, however, and the first attempt did not materialize. Nothing daunted he again commenced operations, and by the assistance of influential citizens succeeded in perfecting a permanent organization and having himself appointed secretary. Quite an amount of money was paid into his hands, by members and outside parties, which he failed to turn over to the treasurer of the society.

In the meantime, on the strength of his being such a devout Christian, and secretary of the above named society, he secured credit at many of the business places in town and run himself hopelessly in debt, his employer, Black, becoming security in several cases. Last week Wednesday Mr. Black left town on his wedding tour, intending to be absent a week or ten days. He left Sammeth in charge of the store. There were several suits of clothing in the place completed and ready for customers. They were taken and the money paid to Sammeth, who deposited but $40 of the amount received. Last Saturday he appeared very anxious to have his wife secure an extra supply of shoes, etc. On Monday morning he arose, dressed and informed his wife that he was going down to the Willcox hotel for breakfast. Instead of doing this he went to the home of an employe of Black, living on Nichols street, gave her the key to the store, telling her that he was going away, but would be back at noon. At the depot he met Frank Wetmore and informed him that he was going to Corning to meet his brother.

When the other employes opened the store that morning everything was found in confusion. Drawers were partially pulled out and clothing scattered around on the counters. Mrs. Sammeth was appalled to, but could give no explanation of her husband's conduct. She appeared greatly surprised to learn that he had left town, but afterwards admitted to Miss Kate Brew that she didn't think Sammeth would return to Wellsboro. When asked concerning his disappearance she seemed very reticent and unwilling to talk on the subject. This led those who talked with her to entertain the opinion that she had known of Sammeth's departure long before the other employes of the store informed her of the fact.

On Tuesday Mr. Moses Yale received two letters from Sammeth. Both were dated at Corning. The first was written in the Corning Y. M. C. A. rooms and the second on Dickinson House stationery. The letters were as follows:

Y. M. C. A. ROOMS,
CORNING, N. Y., May 20, 1890.

MR. M. YALE, ESQ.

Dear Sir and Brother.—You will be surprised to hear from me. I went to your house yesterday for the purpose of talking to you, but I could not. Really, Yale, you will you please help my wife and comfort her. I left home this morning, because I am myself too deep in debt and can't get out of. And now, Mr. Yale, I will tell you all. I am to get work soon and pay of every cent I owe. But what will I do with my poor wife. O how much she must suffer. O, Brother Yale, for the love of God, do something for her until you hear from me again. In haste. M. F. SAMMETH.

DICKINSON HOUSE,
CORNING, N. Y., May 20, 1890.

MR. M. YALE, ESQ.

Dear Brother.—You must have my first letter by this time. Have you seen my good wife. O God forgive me for making her so much trouble. I feel that God will help me to get a speedy place so I can make a good living for my wife, and please help her wont you some, and I will do all I can to repay you. Tell her to be cheerful. I think she must be most wild, but you don't know my temptation. Tell her I get my account book of Black and charge me with $10. I will write as soon as I can get a good place to work. May God ever forgive me, but I know he will, so please do this favor for me. Send me a letter, but I will let you know to-morrow. My best wishes to my good wife and baby. M. F. SAMMETH.

Mr. Yale replied to these letters by telling Sammeth he had better return, be a man and pay his debts, as he could not escape the consequences of his rash act.

The amount of Sammeth's liabilities cannot be accurately determined at present, but it is believed they will amount to quite a large sum, as he has victimized many who have not reported their loss. Last week he left an old watch at R. Pagan's jewelry store for repairs and was given a gold one to carry until the work was completed. This watch he carried away with him.

Another letter dated at New York, May 27, was received by Mr. Yale yesterday. In it Sammeth says he has secured work and hopes to soon have his wife and baby with him. This confirms the statement that he left Wellsboro for the purpose of defrauding his many creditors and his employer.

Time-Stained Deeds Just Recorded.

Among the transfers in real estate in this week's GAZETTE will be found some ancient documents which have just been placed on record. The first of these is a deed dated Delmar, August 16, 1816, from Treasurer Benjamin W. Morris to the Commissioners of Tioga county, for 990 acres of land consideration $43.25. The next two deeds are from and to the same parties and bear a like date. The fourth is dated September 15, 1828, and by Treasurer Elihu Hill conveys to William Willard Jr., 990 acres of land for $3.71. The last three are Commonwealth patents in parchment and though time stained give evidence that they will last for generations to come. The first conveys 98 acres of land situate in Morris to William Willard Jr. for $12 and was executed September 2, 1835. The second grant is to James Benkard for a like number of acres in Morris for the same consideration and bears the date of December 7, 1836. According to the last of these ancient papers James Benkard on June 5, 1838, secured another grant of 990 acres in Morris for the sum of $12.

The Morris Saw-Mill Burned.

The Blossburg Coal Company's saw mill at Morris was burned yesterday (Wednesday) forenoon at about 10 o'clock. The mill was in operation at the time with a full force of men at work. The fire originated in a large quantity of shavings, thoroughly saturated with oil, under the mill. It was impossible to save the machinery, only the hardest [illegible] the flames. DEATH OF LUCIUS TRUMAN.

An Old and Esteemed Citizen Summoned to the Further Shore.

Mr Lucius Truman, one of Wellsboro's well known citizens, died last Friday afternoon at his home on Charleston street. He had long been a sufferer from an incurable disease, and about four weeks ago was confined to his house by an attack of this trouble more acute than usual. The symptoms were so distressing that his relatives and friends were led to believe the end was near, and he apparently realized the gravity of the situation, but maintained a cheerful spirit while consciousness lasted. Death was a release from hopeless suffering. He leaves a wife, two little daughters and five children by a former marriage. The funeral was held from the family residence Monday afternoon, and was attended by the members of George Cook Post, G. A. R., and the friends and neighbors of the deceased. Rev. O. S. Chamberlayne, of the M. E. Church, officiated.

Mr. Truman was born at Owego, N. Y., April 18, 1818. He graduated from the Owego Academy and entered his father's employ in that village. In 1840 he was united in marriage to Miss Mary P. Leach, a young lady of Owego. After remaining in business at Owego for some time Mr. Truman resolved upon a change, and came to this county, entered into business relations with Mr. John R. Bowen and began extensive lumbering operations on Pine creek and its tributaries. In 1857 the firm made some heavy purchases of land in Minnesota and Wisconsin. The financial panic which followed soon after caused them to lose heavily and necessitate a dissolution of the firm. Mr. Truman then located in Philadelphia, but at the breaking out of the Rebellion came back to Tioga county and assisted in raising a company of volunteers. On May 15, 1861, he was mustered into service as First Lieutenant of Company E, of the First Rifles (old Bucktails.) After serving with ability for four years he was mustered out as Quartermaster of the same regiment on July 28, 1865.

At the close of the war he again resumed the lumbering business in company with Mr. Bowen, his former partner, and in 1878 married Miss Mary D. Doumaux, of Charleston. The firm prospered, but sustained a heavy loss by the burning of their sash and blind factory at the foot of Main street in June, 1878. In 1883 he was appointed Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, which position he held until President Cleveland appointed a Democrat.

He held several borough offices, which evidenced the esteem in which he was held by his fellow citizens. In 1867 he was elected County Auditor and for about four years past efficiently discharged the duties of crier of the county courts. He will be missed not alone by his grieving relatives, but also by the large number of friends who regret his death.

THE STRIKING MINERS.

The Situation Remains Unchanged—Strange Actions of the Fall Brook Company.

The striking miners of Tioga county and the coal companies are no nearer a settlement than they were a week ago. The men employed by the Fall Brook Coal Company at Fall Brook and Morris Run were to have been paid on the 16th and 17th inst. When the men demanded the money due them they were told by Paymaster O'Donnell that he had been instructed to pay only those who would consent to leave. The miners who reside at Blossburg and Morris Run were informed that they could not get their money. This action on the part of the company does not meet with the approval of the miners or laboring men throughout the county. The men have worked hard for their money and should be paid.

Crowds of miners are leaving the mining towns daily. Those who remain expect to be served with a notice to vacate the dwellings in which they live. The miners are not anticipating a prompt settlement and is generally the belief that they will be evicted from their present homes that none have planted the small piece of land allotted to each.

Superintendent Mecaw of the United Glass Company, which has factories at Blossburg, Covington and this place, is reported as saying that the works will have to be shut down this week unless a supply of coal is received.

OSCEOLA OCCASIONALS.

The Explosion at Woodhull—A Fine Concert—Personal and Other Items.

Last Thursday about noon word came to this place that the boiler in Philip Tubbs portable saw mill, situated on the farm of Wm. Wildrick, in the town of Woodhull, N. Y., about five miles from here, had exploded, injuring several persons quite badly. The two Drs. Humphrey and several of our citizens went to the scene of the explosion and when they returned confirmed the report. George Striker fireman in the mill, who resided in the village of Woodhull, was so badly injured that he died the same day. Barney Gee was also injured very badly, and it was thought he could not recover; but at the present writing he is reported as improving. A son of Wm. Wildrick was also injured quite badly, but not fatally. He, too, is on the mend. Willis Tubbs, son of Samuel Tubbs, was slightly injured. I understand that Mr Hiram Taylor, of this village, superintended the setting up of the mill, and told them that the boiler was not safe to fire up until it was repaired, but they fired it up with the above result.

The concert given by the Osceola Parlor Orchestra at the Presbyterian Church last Wednesday evening, was a decided success. There was a good attendance, and the selections were excellent and well rendered. Mr. M. F. Hammond has added fresh laurels to his fame as an organizer and conductor of bands. The receipts from the affair were $36.80, which is to be divided between the orchestra and the Church after the expenses are paid.

Mr. Gene Stevens, who has been traveling with a show for the past three or four years, is home on his Summer vacation.

Mr. Joseph Barker fell on the sidewalk last Wednesday evening while returning from the concert, and sustained some severe bruises.

A former pastor, Rev. G. O. Jones, will deliver a lecture entitled "What Are You and Who Are You," in the M. E. Church this (Monday) evening, May 26th.

CHAPTER I.

[illegible] Chief—" he began.

[illegible] ing bell with alarm-

[illegible] ie to a porter, "put this [illegible] tramp out I thought you fired him an hour ago."

"So I did, sir," said Walsh, rolling up his sleeves, "but he don't come back this time unless his remainders is brought up from the sidewalk in a basket."

Mr Drane turned about with the intention of standing the porter on his head for his impertinence, a thing he could easily have done, for he was a young man of remarkable strength and excellent training in the use of it; but as he turned he saw his own image in a long mirror let into the wall. He was the ideal dead beat. He stared at this libelous caricature of himself with utter amazement The character reached out from the mirror and seized upon him with a grip he could not shake off. He seemed to shrink morally, intellectually and physically to fit his garments and there was no more back-bone in his body

He was the tramp all over. In spite of himself, he played the part to the life and submitted to ejection with only the ordinary protestations of injured innocence which are always ridiculous.

He stood on the edge of the sidewalk and endeavored to collect his senses. It was time to stop making mistakes and he knew it. Evidently he must have money, and the only way to get it that was speedy enough to satisfy the demands of his impatience was by wire. He found a telegraph office and wrote out a modest request that his father in Kansas City should send five hundred dollars at the rate of one hundred and ninety thousand miles a second or faster if the electricity could be hurried.

It was a branch telegraph office and a young man with a shrewd face was in charge.

"Send this collect," said Lawrence, laying down his message.

"What do you take me for?" inquired the young man, blandly.

Lawrence recognised that some explanation was necessary, so he briefly outlined the case. The young man looked interested, and Lawrence was encouraged. He entered more into detail, and the young man put on a sweet and trustful smile. Lawrence reached the point in his narrative where the porter loomed into prominence, and he hesitated, feeling the humiliation of his defeat.

"And then—and then," said he, blushing.

"And then," said the young man, solemnly, "you put the cork back into the bottle and the green snakes disappeared. I commend your prudence. You've had enough."

"Do you mean to intimate that I am intoxicated?"

"Not at all," replied the young man; "but you'll have to try this story at the main office on Broadway. It is too exciting for my nerves."

From this position the manager refused to recede, and Lawrence was obliged to content himself with directions how to find the main office. It was not a very long walk, but shame at his garments made it a path of torture. It was not plain sailing after he got there, either, for it took half an hour of painful argument to coax the message on to the wire.

The answer was slow in coming. The long evening twilight was well advanced before he was notified that Kansas City had been heard from. This was the reply:

"Have wired money to New Haven.

"SANFORD DRANE."

When Lawrence read this he deeply regretted his small command of expletives. His disappointment nearly burst him.

"Any reply?" asked the man who had brought the telegram. Lawrence's temper got the better of him, and he wrote:

"Why didn't you send it to Jericho?

"L. D."

He, cooled down after awhile, and finally persuaded the night manager to have a query sent to New Haven. The answer read as follows:

"Lawrence Drane collected money here. Fully identified."

When this reply had been read by the night manager it was evident that he had made up his mind what to do. Lawrence saw it in his eyes, and he knew that he was in a bad scrape. He prepared to get out, for he was well aware that arrest stared him in the face. The manager tried to detain him. Lawrence pushed him over a chair and fled, hotly pursued by a half dozen messenger boys and a few clerks. He was too nimble for them, however, and in a few minutes he stood alone upon the street, penniless, tired and hungry.

It is a curious physiological fact that a man can voluntarily abstain from food for twenty-four hours with far less remonstrance from his stomach than that organ will make if its owner unwillingly fasts for half that time. When Lawrence realized that he had not money enough to buy a sandwich he became hungrier than he had ever been before in his life. He was positively faint, and as he stood upon a corner trying to decide upon a course of action he closed his eyes and actually reeled with exhaustion.

A man passing rapidly along ran against him. Lawrence did not even look at him

"Poor fellow," muttered the stranger, "he's blind," and he slipped a ten-cent piece into Lawrence's hand.

"Confound you!" exclaimed Lawrence, in a rage, "I can see as well as you can"

The stranger opened his eyes, his mouth and his charitable heart at the same moment.

"Have I lived to see this day!" he cried "Here, my friend, here is half a dollar for the only really honest man in New York

Lawrence refused it and tried to give back the dime to the stranger wouldn't take it. He appeared to be an exceptional man and an old fellow. Lawrence walked [illegible] aside for a few steps, and [illegible] that here was a [illegible] opportunity for the loving ears [illegible] hope in [illegible] no further than [illegible] financial solid[illegible] when he heard [illegible] New game new game [illegible] but I'm onto [illegible]

Then he hurried away, and Lawrence was [illegible] until he found himself [illegible] wholly unprofitable [illegible]

He debated long and [illegible] the question how he should expend his cents. That he should turn free with the dime of course a foreg[illegible] seemed not to occur to him. But how could he get the most for his money? He tried to recall the stories he had heard of men who had been in similar depths of poverty, stories told by Bohemian acquaintances who prided themselves upon such experiences. In all of these that he could remember the salvation of the narrator had ultimately depended upon that great modern institution, the free lunch He had never had any personal experience with such fare because he was a total abstainer, and never visited places where free lunches are found, but he thought he knew the machinery pretty well from the experience of others. It was necessary to buy a drink at the bar, after which one could go to [illegible]

New York is that kind of a town. Lawrence hesitated. He reflected that his circumstances did not justify him in selecting a gilded den of vice where drinks might be fifteen cents apiece He must choose something better suited to a gentleman in adversity He selected a den without any gilding and entered Approaching the bar he put down his fifteen cents and tried to think of some mild direction in which he could safely take It was one of Mr Drane's peculiarities that [illegible] without a most instantaneous [illegible] tion. He never dared drink even a glass of wine with his dinner because it went to his head Beer he detested He was in a quandary

"Well, young feller?" said the bartender, interrogatively At that moment Lawrence's eyes rested upon this inscription:

GENUINE NEW JERSEY APPLE-JACK, TEN CENTS

"That must be something like cider," he reflected, and then he said aloud: "Give me a glass of apple-jack"

"It's a little out of season, but I'll go yer," said the bartender, and he produced the fluid Lawrence drank it in a hurry, because he was anxious to get it the free lunch. It made him cough.

"Your apple-jack is a trifle strong," said he, apologetically.

"If you don't like our apple-jack," said the barkeeper, "you can take it out'n de place, see?"

Lawrence hastened to say that on second thought he found it the best he had ever tasted. In reality he perceived with horror that it was already going to his head. There was a mist before his eyes as he made for the lunch counter, but that was not the reason why he did not find what he expected. He saw all that there was—a few fragments of crackers in the bottom of a big bowl and a liberal supply of pickled cucumbers in a tin pan. That was all. And the dime was irrevocably gone.

He gathered up a few cracker crumbs and tried to eat one of the pickles, but as a Bohemian meal it was not a success. Ten minutes later he was out in the street. The apple-jack was with him, and it was very busy. It made the lights in the windows dance like demons; it dug holes in the pavement under his feet; it filled his brain with a foolish exhilaration which gradually subsided into a confused shame at the thought that he, Lawrence Drane, a gentleman born and bred, was homeless, hungry, ragged and drunk—yes, actually drunk on the streets of New York.

He staggered along he knew not how far, it seemed interminable miles, till at length he came to a broad park in the middle of the city. There he fell upon a bench, and an uneasy sleep closed his eyes.

CHAPTER II.

THE PRINCESS IN DISGUISE.

A bird was twittering in the tree above him when Mr. Drane awoke. His consciousness returned at a jump with the opening of his eyes, and as he looked up at the gray sky he murmured "And rosy-fingered Dawn brought in the Day."

For a full minute he sat there, his lungs filled with the freshness of morning, his mind with the shallow exhilaration consequent upon the last fumes of intoxication; his legs stretched out at a preposterous angle, his hands plunged into his trousers' pockets, his hat defiantly poised upon his left ear He looked at his shabby boots and shabbier trousers and smiled in infinite amusement.

"A man in my circumstances," he thought, "would never imagine that a bundle of rags may ill conceal so much real joy. Glorious morning Lucky to see it, by Jove."

This was a fatal reflection

"My circumstances!" he continued. "What are they? These are not mine at all. They belong to someone else."

His eyes were fixed at the moment upon a rent in his trousers which admitted a small detachment of cool, morning breeze fresh from the sea The smile on his face gave way to an expression of disgust, and he sat up in sudden irritation. This movement caused a sharp pain to shoot across his back, which reminded him that the way of the transgressor is hard.

And then the full, delightful, cussedness of the situation dawned upon him. What should he do? What could he do?

He sat up again and looked hopelessly about. Upon a bench not fifteen paces away was a young woman, evidently a servant of some kind, for her dress was of plain material, set off with big white cuffs at the sleeves, and such a frill of lace at the neck as only ladies' maids wear. Her face was concealed by a kerchief which she held to her eyes, and which Mr. Drane doubted not was in a process of lachrymose drenching. He watched her with languid interest, wondering stupidly what brought her there at such an hour, whether she had been locked out and feared a reprimand or discharge when she should go home, whether, perhaps, she, too, had indulged too freely in—bah! Mr. Drane recoiled in profound horror at the suggestion. Was it possible that a mere accidental change in circumstances, the mere accoutrements of the slums, should make him capable of entertaining for an instant such a thought about a woman? Was a man to be the victim of his garments?

In silent reparation for his unuttered offense Mr. Drane began vigorously to think all manner of pretty things about the unhappy young woman, insisting to himself that she must be beautiful, innocent, injured, lovely and so on, until presently, his adjectives having been three times exhausted, he had worked himself into a fair frenzy of interest about her. He longed to see her face, but that she kept persistently concealed, to hear her voice, but not even a low sob rewarded his attentive ear A moment more and he would have resumed his miserable self-contemplation, but his interest in the young woman was sustained by an unexpected episode

SHE DIDN'T HAVE HER WEALTH WITH HER.

Across the park came [illegible] man [illegible] York [illegible] He wore an approved [illegible] and the complexion [illegible] and was now going home on principle holding it as an axiom of gentlemanly behavior that one should always be in bed by sunrise.

Mr Drane did not observe this vision of prosperous indolence until it passed directly before the weeping young woman. It was clear that the man addressed her for she started and dearly and took her kerchief from her eyes Mr. Drane's brows contracted and he watched the scene with more than curiosity He saw the young man step nearer to the bench, put out his hand towards the young woman and move as if he would sit down beside her.

He saw the young woman rise hastily and try to walk away, but the man laid his hand upon her shoulder. A second later and Drane had vaulted the railing which separated the path from the grass and he was following it up with long leaps much stronger when Mr Drane interrupted him.

"Speak a single word that fails in respect to this woman" said he "or raise your finger to do her an injury and I'll break every bone in your body

Will you take the liberty to—"

Mr Drane lost patience and knocked the fellow down It was a straight quick blow and it crossed the deltoid [illegible] man who received it staggered to his feet [illegible] about this point [illegible] rapidly away

Mr Drane turned to the lady's maid, who, very pale, was leaning heavily against a tree

"I trust that I did not frighten you," he said "Perhaps I should have been less violent"

The maid did not reply at once. She looked at Mr Drane in a daze of surprise until a faint color crept into her cheek and a suspicion of a smile crossed her lips Then Mr Drane remembered. He glanced at his remnant of a hat which he held in his hand, and his eyes immediately fell, but he found no comfort in his boots, where they rested All his gentility departed on the instant, and he shifted awkwardly, trying to speak and merely mumbling. With the same irresistible gaucherie he passed his hand over his chin, and the rough stubble there gave further evidence of his absurdly miserable situation. The young woman seemed to realize somewhat of his emotions, for her face instantly became serious and she said, softly:

"I am sure I owe very much to your kindness, your courage, your muscle. Truly I am very grateful."

Mr. Drane knew that he was blushing, and he wondered whether his face were clean enough to show it. He looked up and saw the young woman's blue eyes regarding him compassionately.

"I feel as if I must apologize for addressing you at all, miss," he half stammered. "I forgot my—well, my loathsome appearance. It isn't mine, it isn't my fault; in fact, I am not exactly the thing you see."

"Oh, forgive me if I have appeared to notice any thing but your goodness, sir," exclaimed the young woman, approaching him impulsively as she spoke; "you have doubtless been unfortunate, perhaps seen better days. I am sure you are a gentleman at heart, and I am grateful, indeed I am, believe me," and without further ado she took his hand and pressed it warmly in both of hers. Mr. Drane winced. There was the most delicate condescension in her manner and tone; her action said what words would have rendered offensive: "See, I recognize your nobility of character, no matter how ugly is your disguise, and I am not ashamed to acknowledge it." To be thus treated by a servant!

Yesterday this interesting young person would have stammered in his presence, hung her head, and would have been overwhelmed at receiving a service at his hands. Now, forsooth, she speaks grandly, airs her superiority, condescends to grasp Mr. Lawrence Drane's hand. The unhappy man began to experience profound resentment at this conceited lady's maid when a surprising change in her manner aroused his curious interest. She let fall his hand as impulsively as she had seized it, blushed painfully and looked at her white little hands which she folded before her.

"Alas! I forgot," she said, and her lips trembled. "You can not understand, of course. Oh, dear! oh, dear! You see, I, too, am not at all what you see me, or what you think I am."

Mr. Drane hastened to give the lie to his recent emotions.

"I am sure, miss," he declared, gallantly, "I have seen you and thought of you only as a lady in distress to whom it has been my unalloyed pleasure to render some small assistance."

The young woman looked up again. Her eyes were brimming with tears, nevertheless she laughed softly—

"I can not help it, miserable as I am," she said; "for your words do sound so incongruous," and she glanced as if in spite of herself at Mr. Drane's tattered clothing.

"Yes, miss," responded Mr. Drane, humbly. Then gathering courage from the remnants of his pride he added: "And do you know, miss, I have thought the same about your words," and he made no disguise of looking at the big cuffs, the emblem of her social position

"I do not wonder," she replied, calmly, "for I am not 'miss' at all. I am a widow"

"I am deeply grieved" exclaimed Mr. Drane, hastily. "A blow of that nature coming upon one so young must be severe indeed."

There was a most improper twinkle in the young woman's eyes as she responded:

"Pray do not distress yourself. My widowhood came so unexpectedly, was such a surprise, in fact, that it was more of a shock than a blow. There were certain compensating circumstances, but, of course, I ought not to speak of such a matter lightly."

"No, I suppose not," admitted Mr. Drane, rather dubiously. Even in his wretched situation he felt an extraordinary interest in this young widow, and he wondered again vaguely how it came that she was away from her employment at daybreak She was tapping the ground with her foot thoughtfully, evidently hesitating about continuing her explanation. Mr. Drane was naturally curious. Circumstances had brought them strangely together. What could be better than to exchange confidences? He began:

"You have been so good, madam, as to admit the possibility of my having seen better days. That is decidedly the case, and I mean to see better ones yet if luck is not wholly against me"

Then he stopped abruptly, for the consciousness of his situation overwhelmed him, and he felt the absurdity of confiding in a mere servant. The young woman did not notice his manner.

"It is you who have been good," she said, "and you ought to know more fully how you have befriended me. My story is a strange one; people do not credit it, but I trust you will believe me Let us sit down, for I am fatigued with anxiety and sleeplessness."

"Some lives are like Horse shoes the more worn the brighter." Busy wives who use SAPOLIO never seem to grow old. Try a cake.

A complete wreck of domestic happiness has often resulted from badly washed dishes, from an unclean kitchen, or from trifles which seemed light as air. But by these things a man often judges of his wife's devotion to her family, and charges her with general neglect when he finds her careless in these particulars. Many a home owes a large part of its thrifty neatness and its consequent happiness to SAPOLIO.

Grocers often substitute cheaper goods for SAPOLIO, to make a better profit. Send back such articles, and insist on having just what you ordered.

BROOKE HALL

COT A SEAT BESIDE HIS GIRL.

One Touch of Nature That Made a Car Load of Passengers Kin

A young man and his best girl got into a Third avenue "L" car recently at the Fifty third street station and looked around for a seat over the N Y Herald. It was just about the time that the people were going to the theatre and the car was crowded

There were two seats down by the door at which the young couple entered. One was on either side of a musician in uniform. The young man put his sweetheart in the nearest seat at once and then stopped and asked the musician to take the one beyond him. He attracted the attention of the persons in that end of the car, and their looks and whispers roused the rest of the passengers.

All eyes were directed at the young man standing in front of his girl and holding on by a strap and the musician sitting sullenly in his seat with his instrument in his lap. The girl was smiling and blushing, and gazing at the young man out of a pair of beautiful blue eyes in a manner that might compensate him for any amount of hardship encountered in her behalf.

She was a very pretty girl with teeth as white as snow, and there were many men in the car who would be glad to have a chance to hold on by a strap for her sake. Her little hands were folded modestly in her lap and a pair of patent-leather tipped-toe gaiters peeped from beneath her draperies. He was a lucky young man, though he wasn't quite comfortable, as he saw he was occupying the attention of the whole car. He looked back huntterable love, of course, on the fair maiden as he hung on by the strap, and presently, as if shocked by the same impulse, three men went over to the instrumentalist.

"Get up!" they said between their teeth, as if with one voice, and the musician rose enough to get free of the division and dropped heavily into the next seat. The nearest man of the three motioned the young man to the empty seat. He thanked them and took it. The girl bowed, and a barely audible "Thank you!" escaped her ruby lips. The three men took off their hats to her and returned to their places, greeted by the plaudits of the car.

A Scrap of Paper Saves Her Life.

It was just an ordinary scrap of wrapping paper, but it saved her life. She was in the last stages of consumption, told by physicians that she was incurable and could live only a short time, she weighed less than seventy pounds On a piece of wrapping paper she read of Dr. King's New Discovery, and got a sample bottle, it helped her, she bought a large bottle, it helped her more, bought another and grew better fast, continued its use and is now strong, healthly, rosy, plump, weighing 140 pounds. A Woman in the Case.

There always is. She is the power behind the throne. A woman's influence over the man who loves her is often absolute. To wield so great a power to guide, strengthen and help her husband, a woman's mind should be clear and healthy. It cannot be if she is suffering from any functional derangement How many a home is made unhappy because she who should be its life and light is a wretched, depressed, morbid invalid! Wives, mothers and daughters, why suffer, from "female complaints" which are sapping your lives away, when Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will renew your health and gladden those about you? It has restored happiness to many a saddened life. Why endure martyrdom, when release is so easy? In its special field there never was a restorative like the "Favorite Prescription"

Loveliness as a Fine Art.

Every lady who has used "Glenn's Sulphur Soap" will admit that the improvement of her complexion should be classed among the Fine Arts. Though she may be past the heyday of youth, yet, like a faded picture retouched with its original tints, she blooms anew under the influence of this rejuvenating soap. It has too, a rare and delicate order, far superior to the sickly perfumes of the day, and a distinguished chemist pronounces it harmless. "Hill's Instantaneous Hair Dye" is also a wonder-worker. It gives to gray hair or and undesirable color a most perfect and brilliant black or brown tint, is safe, sure and cheap.

THE STRAWSONIZER.

A Novel Agricultural Implement at the Paris Exposition

Perhaps a single implement of the farm can [illegible] attractive [illegible] Strawsonizer [illegible] Exposition [illegible] something like a two wheeled cart with some apparatus over the axle and a hopper above. It is an automatic distributor and will distribute in a minute spray either liquid or powdered fertilizers and insecticides in the form of a dry powder The claim is made that it will also broadcast all kind of fine grain in any quantity and with absolute evenness The broadcasting of seeds, insecticides, fertilizers, can be done at the rate from four to eight acres per hour. It distributes these various articles in the form of a spray, spreading them more evenly in a subdivided condition than was ever before attained. This can be inferred from the fact that the Strawsonizer will distribute as small a quantity as fifty pounds of nitrate of soda per acre with great evenness, or one gallon of petroleum can be sprayed like fine dew over an acre. With the proper attachments the sprays can be thrown over the trees, hop-vines, grape-vines, etc., and will doubtless come into general use for applying paris green and other insecticides to orchards, vineyards, and potatoes, and all other crops. For distributing small quantities of liquid poisons or offensive matter it is especially valuable. The machine is worked with one horse and a boy to drive. The practicability of the machine seems to have been thoroughly demonstrated by repeated tests last year, and this season several Strawsonizers are at work in England and France. It is probable that the Strawsonizer will be on the American market in 1890.

His Bald Head Won Him a Wife.

In the book of Mrs. Laulii Willis, the Samoan woman whose husband, a contractor, left Alameda several days ago and has since been missing, occurs the following quaint story of how she fell in love with her husband:

"The first thing I saw when we went along-side the ship was a white man with a bald head. That looked very funny to me, as I had never seen a bald-headed man before. He was real fat and nice looking, but he did not have any hair on his head; and I got my brother, who could talk English, to ask him, just as soon as we got aboard, where was all the hair that belonged on his head. And the white man told him that he lived in California, and they did not have any cold weather there, but had what they called 'a glorious climate,' and the climate' had taken all the hair off his head. We got very well acquainted, and I liked him, because when another white man kept talking to me this one with the bald head quarrelled with him and knocked him down so he should not bother me."—Oakland Tribune.

A "Guide to the Churches of London" shows that the numbers of metropolitan churches has increased between 1883 and 1889 from 528 to 1,016. Altar vestments are now the rule in 69 churches as against 37 in, 1883, altar lights in 110 as against 64 in 1883, and the "eastward position," in 836 as against 304 in 1883. In the same period the number of churches in which the communion is celebrated in the evening has decreased from 289 to 272.

A photograph of an Arctic mirage is said to have been received at San Francisco from Prof. Richard D. Willoughby of Alaska. It was taken at Glacier Bay and represents a mysterious aerial city. In the foreground is a graveled walk, a stone fence, a rustic seat and a child at play. Beyond the stone wall are the roofs of houses and clumps of trees. In the distance are the half-completed towers of a cathedral, together with several tall public buildings, while far away, enveloped in what appears to be a cloud-like atmosphere, are tall smoke stacks and the towers of churches. The style of architecture is decidedly modern Some persons who see it denounce the picture as a fraud, but some of the best informed people regard it as genuine, Prof. Willoughby is said to be a man of high character.

The Value of Pure Wine in Sickness.

The chief difficulty with reliable wines has been their scarcity and richness in body, but this has been removed by the introduction of a pure native wine, produced by Mr. A Speer, of New Jersey He has submitted his wine to the test of many celebrated physicians and chemists, and all concur in its purity, rich medical properties and superiority to all Port Wines. Most of them prescribe it in cases of debility, affections of the kidneys and chronic complaints, requiring a tonic, sudorific or diuretic treatment. Examiner.
